SAGE REFERENCE'S
ENCYCLOPEDIA OF GIFTEDNESS, CREATIVITY, AND TALENT
EXPLORES THE WORLD OF HUMAN ABILITY

Los Angeles, London, New Delhi, Singapore, and Washington, DC (April 8, 2009)—The nature of intelligence, the sources of innovation, and the ways of nurturing special abilities were studied by a relatively small community of scholars until the last decade. Since then the field has exploded as controversy has erupted over questions about the nature of talent, such as, “Is there just one intelligence or many?” and “Is creativity a personality trait, an aspect of consciousness, or an interaction of culture and the individual?”

SAGE Reference’s unprecedented, new, two-volume Encyclopedia of Giftedness, Creativity, and Talent is the first comprehensive reference source to delve into this increasingly important, complex field. The encyclopedia synthesizes state-of-the-art research and ready-to-use facts from a wide range of disciplines. More than 400 highly readable, A-to-Z entries present the topic’s major facets, research findings, and their applications to education, training, science, the arts, athletics, and everyday life. A sample of topics includes the following:

- Ability Grouping
- Achievement and Aptitude Testing
- Curriculum
- Giftedness in Different Populations
- Emotional Intelligence
- Gender Differences
- Genius
- Learning Styles
- Multiple Intelligences
- Musical Ability
- Neuroscience
- Prodigies
- Self-Actualization
- Social Development
- Thinking Skills

All public and academic libraries will be sure to purchase SAGE’s Encyclopedia of Giftedness, Creativity, and Talent so students, scholars, educators, counselors, administrators, government leaders, and families, as well as the gifted, creative, and talented students themselves have access to the full range of information related to this important field.

Editor Barbara Kerr is the Williamson Family Distinguished Professor of Counseling Psychology at the University of Kansas.
