Award-winning SAGE Full-Text Collections join the California Digital Library's wealth of scholarly resources

Fulfilling its mission to harness technology and innovation and leverage the intellectual and cultural resources of the University of California, the California Digital Library (CDL) recently acquired the award-winning SAGE Full-Text Collections.

Blaise R. Simqu, SAGE's President and CEO said, "We're pleased to be helping CDL expand its already impressive volume of digital information resources by providing the stunning wealth of social science journals comprising the SAGE Full-Text Collections." Now, all ten University of California campuses will have complete access to these significant, scholarly electronic collections.

The SAGE Full-Text Collections are full-text research databases of over 220 of the most popular peer-reviewed journals published by SAGE and participating societies. The Collections are available in ten disciplines and include up to thirty-six years of back issues. Together, the Collections comprise over 80,000 articles, book reviews, and editorials, with all the original graphics and tables in PDF format.

In collaboration with the ten University of California campus libraries, the California Digital Library licenses new digital content to support UC academic and research programs. Established in 1997 as a UC library, the CDL has become one of the largest digital libraries in the world.
