CRIMINOLOGY: A SAGE FULL-TEXT COLLECTION NAMED ONE OF THE BEST REFERENCE SOURCES OF 2003 BY *LIBRARY JOURNAL

Thousand Oaks, California, and London, United Kingdom, June 21, 2004 – Criminology: A SAGE Full-Text Collection has been named one of the best reference sources of 2003 by the esteemed Library Journal. According to the Library Journal, 2003 “was a banner year for electronic reference....Sources and the industry have matured to such an extent.” The Criminology Collection, among others, was chosen by the Library Journal to reflect a spectrum of excellence to which researchers and scholars all want to become accustomed.

Launched in early 2003 in cooperation with Cambridge Scientific Abstracts (CSA), the Criminology Collection is one of six discipline-based premier databases in the SAGE Full-Text Collections, which offer full-text, up-to-date articles in addition to 22 years of backfiles.

“Smartly designed and user friendly, this extensive online collection of journals relating to criminal justice, crime and delinquency, violence, abuse, child maltreatment, and public policy is unique in more ways than one. It features excellent search tips, help screens, and definitions of terms, along with powerful search functions”—Library Journal, April 15, 2004.

By tapping into Criminology: A SAGE Full-Text Collection, faculty, students, and researchers can

- Access the full text of 17 peer-reviewed journals from the library, the campus office, or from a home computer
- Search across current content and up to 22 years of backfiles
- View the full text of citing articles
- Create electronic course packs and reading lists
- Receive alerts on saved searches or new issues of selected titles
