Education and Psychology SAGE Full-Text Collections now available

Thousand Oaks, California, and London, United Kingdom, June 16, 2004 – SAGE Publications and Cambridge Scientific Abstracts (CSA), the team behind the SAGE Full-Text Collections, are pleased to announce the release of two new collections— Education and Psychology. These additional Collections join the well-received current Collections of Communication Studies, Criminology, Politics and International Relations, and Sociology.

The Education Collection consists of 19 titles while the Psychology Collection houses 30 titles. Together, these two new Collections add over 18,000 articles to the existing 27,000 articles in the SAGE Full-Text Collections. For the complete list of journals in the new Education and Psychology Collections, please visit www.sagefulltext.com.

SAGE Full-Text Collections are full-text research databases of peer-reviewed academic journals from SAGE and participating societies. Included titles are among the most popular and most cited journals in their fields. Not only do subscribers have full-text electronic access to the most current issue of the journals and linking capabilities to the popular CSA abstracting databases, they also have access to the journals' backfiles, many going back as far as 22 years.
