SAGE'S UNPRECEDENTED – AND TIMELY – NEW RESOURCE:
ENCYCLOPEDIA OF LEADERSHIP

Thousand Oaks, CA, USA (February 24, 2004) – Why do stories about leaders – from Greek rulers and Chinese emperors to military conquerors, business tycoons and politicians – entrance us? Because everyone – whether they are raising children, forming a militant group, or running for office – faces leadership challenges and opportunities in their own lives.

SAGE Reference's new four-volume Encyclopedia of Leadership presents readers with an unprecedented learning resource. It cohesively synthesizes, for the first time, everything that truly matters about leadership as part of the human experience.

Feathering hundreds of A-to-Z articles written by 400 leading scholars from 17 countries, this invaluable reference source explores leadership theories, practice, and the effects of leadership in the real world. It answers a broad range of questions, such as:

- What are the types of leadership?
- How does one become a good (and maybe great) leader?
- How can leadership theories help us understand contemporary situations?

Authoritative entries like, "The Beatles," "E-Commerce," "Friendship," and "Green Parties" reveal the encyclopedia's sheer scope and interdisciplinary diversity. Biographical essays and case studies focus not only on leaders, but also their followers. Photographs, illustrations and sidebars show leadership in action.

A vital tool, the Encyclopedia of Leadership provides the guidance that scholars, students, professionals, and active citizens alike need to lead in the 21st century.

Senior Editor James MacGregor Burns, of Williams College is a Pulitzer Prize – and National Book Award – winning presidential biographer and a pioneer in the study of leadership. Editor George R. Goethals, of Williams College is the Visiting Scholar at the Jepson School of Leadership Studies at the University of Richmond. Editor Georgia Sorenson, of the University of Richmond, is a Senior Scholar and Founder of the James MacGregor Burns Academy of Leadership at the University of Maryland.
