Announcing New SAGE Full-Text Collections

The first four discipline-specific SAGE Full-Text Collections were launched at ALA Midwinter earlier this year. Now, SAGE Publications and Cambridge Scientific Abstracts (CSA), the team behind the SAGE Full-Text Collections, are pleased to announce the new collections to be added in 2004.

Joining the well-received current collections of Communication Studies, Criminology, Politics and International Relations, and Sociology will be two more new SAGE Full-Text Collections - Education and Psychology.

"We are excited to add these new subjects to the SAGE Full-Text Collections," said SAGE executive vice president Blaise Simqu. "The SAGE Full-Text Collections are excellent research tools for students and faculty members, and we expect that these new Collections will be welcome additions to many college and university libraries."

SAGE Full-Text Collections are a full-text research database of peer-reviewed academic journals from SAGE and participating societies. Included titles are among the most popular and cited journals in their fields. Not only do subscribers have full-text electronic access to the most current issue of the journals and linking to popular CSA abstracting databases, they also have access to the journals' backfiles, many going back as far as 20 years. For the complete list of journals in the SAGE Full-Text Collections, please visit www.sagefulltext.com

CSA is a leading publisher of bibliographic databases and print journals used by more than 4,000 research institutions worldwide. Its award-winning Internet Database Service provides World Wide Web access to more than 50 databases through its Web site (www.csa.com), covering major areas of research.

SAGE Publications is a leading international publisher of journals, books and electronic media for academic, educational and professional markets. Since 1965, SAGE (www.sagepub.com) has helped inform and educate a global community of scholars, practitioners, researchers, and students. SAGE Publications, a privately held corporation, has primary offices in Thousand Oaks, California and in London, England.

SAGE Publications supports Book Aid International, the Journal Donation Project and the World Health Organization HINARI initiative. SAGE Publications is a member of CrossRef.
