Each issue of the American Journal of Evaluation (AJE) explores decisions and challenges related to conceptualizing, designing and conducting evaluations. AJE offers original, peer-reviewed, often highly cited articles about the methods, theory, ethics, politics, and practice of evaluation. We are also interested in essay-length reviews of books on a single topic or issue of relevance to the theory and practice of evaluation and the role of evaluation in society. AJE features broad, multidisciplinary perspectives on issues in evaluation relevant to education, public administration, behavioral sciences, human services, health sciences, sociology, criminology and other disciplines and professional practice fields.

It is also one of the best places to publish your original research. The editorial board of the American Journal of Evaluation invites you to submit your original articles and reviews to the journal. Topics of interest include (but are not limited to):

- Advances in Evaluation Theory
- Evaluation and complexity science
- Evaluation and implementation science
- Evaluation and systems thinking
- Evaluation capacity building
- Evaluation Ethics and Standards
- Evaluation in international settings
- Evaluation issues in a specific field of application
- Meta-evaluation
- Methods and Measurement in Evaluation
- Teaching Evaluation
- The Politics of Evaluation

If prospective contributors have questions or are uncertain about the appropriateness of possible submissions, they are welcome to contact Thomas Schwandt via e-mail at AJEditor@education.illinois.edu or by phone at (217) 333-5350.
