CALL FOR SPECIAL ISSUES

We are always interested in receiving proposals for special issues of the Journal of Management Education. We see them as a central feature of the journal that allows us to direct focused attention on new, emerging, and important topics. We normally run one or two of our six issues a year as special issues. Recent topics have included:

- Assessment in management education
- Crisis management education
- New technological advances applied to management education
- Principles of responsible management education (PRME)
- Healthy, wealthy and wise? Educating management students about stress, performance and wellness

Presently, we have an open call for a special issue on threshold concepts in management education (http://www.uk.sagepub.com/upm-data/55135_JME_Call_Threshold_Concepts.pdf). And we are currently reviewing contributions for a special issue on the recent Carnegie report into management education.

We would like to hear from you if you are interested in guest editing a special issue of our journal. We are open to ideas for special issues for any topic within the ambit of our journal. The editorial team will assess them based on the following criteria:

- Likely impact measured by (1) citations and (2) uptake by management educators
- Interest to readers of the Journal of Management Education
- The opportunity to be first, or early, in an emerging field in management education
- The extent to which the topic is ‘hot’ and/or innovative
- The likelihood that submissions will be attracted
- The credibility of the guest editing team as experts in the subject area and as editors

If you are interested in guest editing a special issue of the Journal of Management Education, we need the following information to be able to assess your proposal:

- A note explaining why the subject of the special issue will be suited to (1) special issue treatment, and (2) readers of the Journal of Management Education. This note should also explain (1) why the topic is of interest, (2) your motivation in crafting the proposal, (3) the impact you expect it to have, and (4) your publishing and editing experience.
- A first draft of your proposed Call for Papers.
- CVs for all prospective guest editors.
Once you have gathered together these materials, please send them to the Editor, Jon Billsberry, by email (j.billsberry@deakin.edu.au).

Note

Whilst most proposals for special issues tend to come from teams of people with an idea they want to pursue, we also construct teams of guest editors around matters that we are interested in. Presently we are particularly keen to build teams to run special issues on the following topics:

- Capitalism and management education
- Massive open online courses (MOOCs)
- Drawing in management education
- The impact of accreditation pressures on management education
- The teaching-research nexus in management education

If you have an interest and expertise in one of these areas, we would be delighted to hear from you. Alternatively, if you have a team interested in one of these areas, please do not hesitate to contact us with your full proposal.
