Community College Review (CCR) invites reviews of current books on topics relevant to community colleges and their stakeholders. CCR has led the nation for 40 years in the publication of scholarly, peer-reviewed research and commentary on community colleges. CCR book reviews, which are published in quarterly issues, serve the purpose of informing readers of recent publications pertaining to community college leadership, faculty, students, organizational strategies, policy, and emerging issues.

Researchers, faculty, practitioners, and advanced graduate students are welcome to submit proposals for book reviews to CCR. Proposals should consist of an APA citation of the book; a brief statement about the book’s significance to community college scholarship, practice, and/or policy; and, a brief summary of the reviewing author's background and interest in the book. Please direct book review proposals and questions to CCR’s book review editor, Mark D’Amico (mmdamico@uncc.edu).

Authors of accepted proposals will be invited to write a book review that is no more than 1,000 words in length. Reviews must include: (1) an APA citation of the book; (2) a concise overview of the book’s primary themes and perspectives; (3) a critical analysis of the book’s coherence and significance that considers the strengths and weaknesses, scholarly rigor, soundness of presentation, fulfillment of stated objectives, and relevance to the field; (4) references, if applicable; and, (5) a one-sentence bio of the reviewing author. Manuscripts must be formatted using the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (6th ed.) and submitted through the journal's electronic peer review site: http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/ccr.

Mark M. D’Amico, Book Review Editor
University of North Carolina at Charlotte
mmdamico@uncc.edu

Jaime Lester, Editor
George Mason University
jlester2@gmu.edu